On our Educational Leadership PGCert programme, you'll develop both 'know how' and 'know why' in relation to educational leadership.

On completing the course, you'll have a good, critical understanding of:

- current thinking and key issues of leadership and strategic management of educational institutions
- relevant leadership theories and their significance for educational leadership
- national and global trends to inform strategic planning and decision making.

This course will help you to study and plan approaches of practitioner enquiry as a means for:

- Developing professional practice
- Promoting educational effectiveness
- Improving educational organisations

At the beginning of the course, we'll ask you to complete a formative reflective professional development statement. This is to tailor the teaching and reading list to your development needs. Previous students and external examiners have identified this personalised approach as a particular strength of the course.

Your Modules

- Leadership and Strategic Management – identify the key role of leadership in creating effectiveness within educational institutions and reflect on yourself as a leader and how you impact your own culture.
- Future of Educational Leadership and Practitioner Research – develop knowledge and skills with respect to the future of educational leadership and consider how it is evolving within the UK and global context, critically engaging with research and data.
